

Global Faculty Initiative

Renewing Christian intellectual life in the world's research universities

PREVIEW RESPONSE

What Can Documentary Film Teach Us About Justice?

Jonathan Brant

University of Oxford

Justice • Theology • 1 min read

facultyinitiative.net/article/what-can-documentary-film-teach-us-about-justice

1. Within the discipline of Christian theology, I am currently working on:
 1. Virtue ethics, particularly practical strategies for the formation of students as wise thinkers and good leaders able to contribute to the common good
 2. Freedom, what virtues are required for the flourishing of highly-educated, cosmopolitan young people who experience a degree of freedom unknown in human history
 3. Culture and the arts, particularly a theology of documentary cinema, what can theologians / Christians learn from documentary practice and vice versa
1. Given the interests listed above, connections and questions relating to the excellent Theology Brief on Justice would include:
 1. If justice is about 'interactions between human beings' then the 'actors' or the 'agents' are clearly important, opening up an interesting question: What virtues might be necessary to underwrite the ability to interact justly – honesty, humility, gratitude?
 2. What might an artform such as documentary cinema, often explicitly concerned with questions of justice, contribute to our discussion of this important topic?

ABOUT THIS DOCUMENT

Document type	Preview Response
Dialogue	Justice
Discipline	Theology
Author	Jonathan Brant
Read online	facultyinitiative.net/article/what-can-documentary-film-teach-us-about-justice

Global Faculty Initiative

Renewing Christian intellectual life in the world's research universities